SALINGER ON SECRECY

Pierre Salinger, in his first public speech since he became press secretary to the President of the United States, has indicted the Eisenhower Administration for "managing" the american people.

Speaking before a state press group in Columbia, South Carolina, Salinger accused the former Administration of withholding facts about the economy until after he November election and he also charged that information related to the defense effort was presented in rosier-than-justified light.

Salinger promised to see to it that the American people were given the acts, as far as he could determine them, in the Kennedy Administration He expressed high ideals in keeping with this policy.

For example, he said that the people could not vote intelligently and hat government could not function most effectively, if the truth was not nown to the electorate.

Whether the news be favorable r unfavorable for the Kennedy Administration, Salinger promised o see to it that the American peoe got the story straight and uncolred. This is all the press can expect from the press secretary and these are splendid assurances. The people and press of the country hope Salinger and the Administration will live up to these admirable ideals.

SALT FROM THE SEA

A salty old custom recently reminded residents of lower Manhattan and Brooklyn Heights that the day of the seafarers is still with us.

The British aircraft carrier Ark Royal was scheduled to pay a courteousy call on New York recently and appeared off the harbor at the salty hour of six-thirty in the morning.

Undaunted by the earliness of the hour, the captain gave the order for the traditional salute and the Ark oyal left fly with 21 blasts from a four-inch gun.

On nearby Governors Island, a gun crew working a 105 mm. howitzer, went into action to reply to the 21-gun salute with a 21-gun welcome. After those forty-two bangs, few residents in the immediate vicinity were left in doubt as to the fact that New York had a caller.

Thereafter, the Ark Royal docked and most of her British crew were given a chance to see New York. But as of the firing time, hundreds of elephone calls poured into police eadquarters — the chief purpose to know what the cannonading was ll about.

They were told that it was all about the sea, and a long-standing custom, etc. But why couldn't these blast be timed to occur later in the day? Usually they are, it was said, but this ship called unusually early. And we suspect that the British captain smiled as he fired away at this wee hour, perhaps remembering the time when the British were driven ut of "the colonies."

MIX-UP IN FAIRS

What had been widely heralded a the world fair of 1964, which is o be held at New York that Year, has now turned into something which ay not be quite up to what people ave been led to expect.

The British Government announced few days ago that the British Govrnment would not exhibit at the ew York Fair of 1964-65. More ver., it is expected that similiar nnouncements may come soon from rance and Italy.

The reason is simple, though it has ot come to light sufficiently until ow. There is a Bureau of Interational Expositions, witha headuarters at Paris which approves or isapproves of world fair projects.

Last November the Bureau turned own the New York fair proposal, favor of sticking by earlier approval of the Seattle World's Fair f 1962. Under the rules of the ureau only one such fair can be Above is the Virginia Division of Forestry nursery at New Kent, Vi rginia, showing a portion million pine seedlings being grown for planting on lands in the state. Last year Appomattox landowners planted 1,150,150 pine seedlings. To date this year lando wners in the county have 675,000 seedlings. The seedlings are available if the landowners want them. pproved in a specified zone in every 0-year period.

New York fair officials sought o reverse the ruling but have fail- d to obtain satisfaction. As a reult, Great Britian will not build a overnment pavilion. Nor will several other countries. And it should b recalled that the pavilions of many of the countries bound by the ureau were among the most popular at the New York World's Fair f 1939.

Meanwhile, the head of the New ork project, Robert Moses, says lans will go ahead for the 1964 xposition and that it will be held egardless of the international bureau's decision He says that private industry and business will probably have exhibits representing heir countries—in cases where the countries officially decline to participate.

The snafu over the proposed orld's fair in New York is disppointing. After getting official . S. Government endorsement of he project, and having announced as a gala world fair, the decision f major nations not to participate ertainly detracts from the prospects of the New York fair.

It is difficult to understand why plans went so far in the face of Seattle's gaining earlier approval for world fair in 1962—if New York expected foreign governments to officially participate in the 1964 New York exposition. It seems now that we in the United States wil have two fairs, both billed as world's fairs, the space of two years, and this certainly not the most desirable approach for American efforts in ig international field.
